

STRAIGHT LINES WITH A QUILTING RULER

CHRISTINA CAMELI

- If you like straight lines in your quilting and you don't feel comfortable using freehand free-motion, you can quilt the lines with a walking foot or quilt with a straight quilting ruler.
- Quilting rulers are taller than rotary cutting rulers. If you try this, be sure you use a ruler meant for free-motion work. You will also need a ruler quilting foot on your machine.
- Straight lines with a ruler work great for filling in small areas. With a walking foot this would require breaking the thread or turning the quilt repeatedly.
- When you quilt with the ruler, keep the ruler foot against the side of the ruler and move slowly and evenly. Your stitching will be 1/4" away from the edge of the ruler so if you want your lines spaced 1/4" apart you can align the ruler with the last line you stitched and get this even spacing.
- You can also use straight edge rulers for beautiful corner-to-edge or corner-to-corner quilting. Practice aligning your ruler 1/4" away from your intended ending place so your stitching falls where you want.
